Introduction

This Compendium<sup>1</sup> explains the principles and provisions of the Bucharest Stock Exchange Code of Corporate Governance (the “Code”) and provides information about international best practices.

This document should be read in conjunction with the Manual for Reporting Corporate Governance (the “Manual”), which helps companies disclose corporate governance information and explain deviations from the Code.

The Compendium reflects the structure of the Code and is divided into four sections: (A) Responsibilities [of the Board]; (B) Risk management and internal control system; (C) Fair rewards and motivation; and (D) Building value through investor relations.

Each section recalls the Code principles and provisions, and provides a commentary on the rationale and best practices. The explanations of the principles and provisions should help companies implement the new BSE Code, whilst the best practices can inspire companies to go beyond Romanian legislation and the Code.

The appendix includes best practice templates of terms of reference for the Board, the Audit Committee and the Nomination Committee, and a sample job description for the Board Secretary.

For convenience, key overlaps between Romanian law<sup>2</sup> and best practices are generally briefly addressed in footnotes throughout the Compendium.

In this document, the term “Board” refers to the Board of Directors in a unitary system and to the Supervisory Board in a two-tier system. The terms “executive” and “non-executive” are defined in the Board composition section.

<sup>1</sup> The Compendium, developed for the Bucharest Stock Exchange by Nestor Advisors, Nestor Nestor Diculescu Kingston Petersen and SC Concept, is designed to provide concise information about the BVB Corporate Governance Code and governance best practice. It is not meant to provide legal advice on the Code and its compliance.

<sup>2</sup> In this document, reference to “Romanian law” means general primary and secondary legislation applicable to all companies from a corporate and securities law perspective, and excludes any industry-specific legislation (including but not limited to specific legislation applicable to banks, investment firms, investment funds, state-owned enterprises).

Section A

Responsibilities [of the Board]

1. Governance formalisation

1.1. General principle

The role of the Board of Directors in a one-tier board system and the role of the Supervisory Board/Management Board in a two-tier board system should be clearly defined and documented in the company's articles of association, internal regulations and/or other similar documents. The Board should ensure that company's articles of association, the resolutions of the general meeting of shareholders, and the internal regulations of the company include a clear distinction of powers and competencies between the general meeting of shareholders, the Board and the executive management.

There should be a clear division of responsibilities between the Board and the executive management.

Board members must strictly observe the secrecy of the proceedings, debates and decisions taken, unless otherwise decided by the Board or unless regulations in force require the appropriate disclosure.

BVB Corporate Governance Code, page 3

1.2. Comply or explain provisions

A.1. All companies should have internal regulation of the Board which includes terms of reference/responsibilities for Board and key management functions of the company, applying, among others, the General Principles of Section A.

A.2. Provisions for the management of conflict of interest should be included in Board regulation. In any event, members of the Board should notify the Board of any conflicts of interest which have arisen or may arise, and should refrain from taking part in the discussion (including by not being present where this does not render the meeting non-quorate) and from voting on the adoption of a resolution on the issue which gives rise to such conflict of interest.

1.3. Commentary

Role of the Board

Two types of Board structures<sup>3</sup>, the unitary and two-tier Board structures, are expressly permitted by Romanian law:

- Unitary or single-tier Board structure, where the governing body is composed of a single Board including executive and non-executive directors.
- Two-tier Board structure, where the governing body is composed of two separate Boards: a Supervisory Board and a Management Board. The Supervisory Board is composed exclusively of non-executive directors and the Management Board is composed entirely of executive officers.

In a unitary system, the Board's role is to provide entrepreneurial leadership of the company within a framework of prudent and effective controls which enables risk to be assessed and managed. The Board should set the company's strategic aims, ensure that the necessary financial and human resources (e.g. Board succession planning and executive remuneration) are in place for the company to meet its objectives, and review management performance. The Board should set the company's values and standards, and ensure that its obligations to its shareholders and others are understood and met.<sup>4</sup> The leadership of the Chairman of the Board is key to achieving these endeavours.

More information about the Board's structure, activities, and responsibilities is available in Appendix 1: Sample Board of Directors charter.

In a two-tier system, the role of the Supervisory Board is usually to appoint, supervise, and advise the members of the Management Board. The Chairman of the Supervisory Board coordinates the work of the Supervisory Board. The Management Board is responsible for the day-to-day running of the company and its members are jointly accountable to the Supervisory Board for the management of the company.

Division of responsibilities between the Board and management

Separation of the Chairman and CEO roles<sup>5</sup>

Since one of the Board's main duties is to monitor and challenge management, the CEO may not be in the best position to lead the Board as Chairman, given his/her executive role in the day-to-day management of the business.

The separation of these roles is mandatory in two-tier systems (e.g. in Germany and Austria) and established best practice in most unitary Board jurisdictions (e.g. the UK, Spain, and Italy). It allows more checks and balances of the decision-making process and increases the non-executive directors' capacity to oversee management. Romanian law<sup>6</sup> does not allow any member of the directorate in two-tier managed companies to simultaneously be a member of the Supervisory Board. However, if the governing body operates under a unitary system, the Chairman can exercise an executive role, whether the CEO or another executive function.

The separation of the two roles may not always be feasible or appropriate; for example, in firms facing a crisis that need to undergo a severe, swift turnaround driven by new leadership.

The Chairman's role is to allow the CEO to lead while ensuring there is adequate challenge from the Board. The Chairman should regularly maintain contact with the Executive Committee/Management Board and, in particular, with the CEO. The Chairman should consult the executive officers on issues of strategy, planning, business development, risk situation, risk management, and compliance. He should also promote a culture of openness and debate by facilitating the effective contribution of non-executive directors in particular and ensuring constructive relations between executive officers/the Management Board and non-executive directors/the Supervisory Board. His/her job is highly sensitive, requiring the ability to compromise and to synthesise others' views.<sup>7</sup>

Governance policies<sup>8</sup>

- The terms of reference

Provision A.1 recommends companies to have internal regulation by having, among other documents, terms of reference for the Board and the key management functions.

The Board terms of reference are intended for its members, the executive team, and any person assisting to Board meetings of the company. Board committees and executive committees have also their own terms of reference (named also "charter").

Terms of reference detail the roles, responsibilities, authorities, composition, relationships, and functioning of different governance bodies and how they relate to one another.

In addition, the Board terms of reference usually include provisions for the management of conflict of interest<sup>9</sup> (as per Provision A.2.).

Appendices 1, 2 and 3 provide examples of terms of reference of a board of directors and of audit and nomination committees.

- Director charter

Although not explicitly referred to in the Code, a director charter is usually also made available to shareholders as part of the internal regulations of governing bodies. This would <sup>9</sup> A conflict of interest refers to a situation in which a senior manager, director, employee, shareholder, or any stakeholder has a direct or indirect competing commercial, professional or personal interest which actually or potentially conflicts with his duties to the company. It extends to instances when the interests of such a person may be reasonably perceived to conflict with his duties to the company. Potential conflicts of interest may result from the use of corporate property, association with competitors of the company, use of information received in the context of director duties, or related-party transactions.

usually include principles such as the principle on confidentiality referred to in Section A: “The Board members must strictly observe the secrecy of the proceedings, debates and decisions taken, unless otherwise decided by the Board or unless regulations in force require the appropriate disclosure.”

- Articles of association

Provision D.1.1 also recommends that companies disclose their articles of association.

A company's articles of association are its internal constitution. The articles are chosen by the members and form a contract between the company and its members. They help to ensure the company's business runs as smoothly and efficiently as possible and will set out how the company will make decisions and include various matters connected with the shares. Every company is required to have articles by law and the articles are legally binding on the company and all of its members.<sup>10</sup>

- Delegation of authorities<sup>11</sup>

The principles of Section A specify that “The Board should ensure that company’s articles of association, the resolutions of the general meeting of shareholders, and the internal regulations of the company include a clear distinction of powers and competencies between the general meeting of shareholders, the Board and the executive management.”

Appropriate delegation of authority is fundamental to corporate governance arrangements i.e. the way in which organisations are directed and controlled. Authority should however be defined clearly such that decisions are made and actions taken by the appropriate people. This is the purpose of a policy defining delegated authorities. In general, authority should be delegated to the point where decisions can be taken most efficiently.

In practice, delegated authorities are often managed thanks to a chart of authorities. This chart defines for all areas where important decisions are to be made (e.g. strategy, budget, organisation, remuneration, procurement, sales, etc) who makes proposals, who reviews them, who decides and who is informed.

- Formalizarea delegării autorității:

Introduces clarification on the Board’s retained authorities and provide guidance to the Chairman on the shape of the Board’s agenda; and Provides members of the Board with a transparent view of executive decision making; and

Is used as an instrument in evaluating management’s performance on the basis of responsibility;

Limits Board members’ and management’s potential liability by ensuring diligence in delegating and exercising authority.

This policy is approved by the Board and should be used by the Board and senior management. This policy is not widely disclosed to stakeholders.

2. Board composition<sup>12</sup>

2.1. General principles

The Board and its committees should have the appropriate balance of skills, experience, gender diversity, knowledge and independence to enable them to effectively perform their respective duties and responsibilities. It is recommended for the majority of non-executive members of the Board of Directors or Supervisory Board to be independent.

BVB Corporate Governance Code, page 3

2.2. Comply or explain provisions

A.3. The Board of Directors or the Supervisory Board should have at least five members.

A.4. The majority of the members of the Board of Directors should be non-executive. At least one member of the Board of Directors or Supervisory Board should be independent, in the case of Standard Tier companies. Not less than two non-executive members of the Board of Directors or Supervisory Board should be independent, in the case of Premium Tier Companies. Each member of the Board of Directors or Supervisory Board, as the case may be, should submit a declaration that he/she is independent at the moment of his/her nomination for election or re-election as well as when any change in his/her status arises, by demonstrating the ground on which he/she is considered independent in character and judgment in practice and according to the following criteria:

A.4.1. Not to be the CEO/executive officer of the company or of a company controlled by it and not have been in such position for the previous five years.

A.4.2. Not to be an employee of the company or of a company controlled by it and not have been in such position for the previous five (5) years.

A.4.3. Not to receive and not have received additional remuneration or other advantages from the company or from a company controlled by it, apart from those corresponding to the quality of non-executive director.

A.4.4. Is not or has not been an employee of, or has not or had not any contractual relationship, during the previous year, with a significant shareholder of the company, controlling more than 10% of voting rights or with a company controlled by it.

A.4.5. Not to have and not have had during the previous year a business or professional relationship with the company or with a company controlled by it, either directly or as a customer, partner, shareholder, member of the Board/Director, CEO/executive officer or <sup>12</sup>Further reading on the split of the Chairman and CEO roles can be found at the Institute of Directors and the OECD. employee of a company having such a relationship if, by its substantial character, this relationship could affect his/her objectivity.

A.4.6. Not to be and not have been in the last three years the external or internal auditor or a partner or salaried associate of the current external financial or internal auditor of the company or a company controlled by it.

A.4.7. Not to be a CEO/executive officer in another company where another CEO/executive officer of the company is a non-executive director.

A.4.8. Not to have been a non-executive director of the company for more than twelve years.

A.4.9. Not to have family ties with a person in the situations referred to at points A.4.1. and A.4.4.

A.5. A Board member's other relatively permanent professional commitments and engagements, including executive and non-executive Board positions in companies and not-for-profit institutions, should be disclosed to shareholders and to potential investors before appointment and during his/her mandate.

A.6. Any member of the Board should submit to the Board, information on any relationship with a shareholder who holds directly or indirectly, shares representing more than 5% of all voting rights. This obligation concerns any kind of relationship which may affect the position of the member on issues decided by the Board.

A.7. The corporate governance statement should contain information on the precise number of the independent members of the Board of Directors or of the Supervisory Board.

Balanced Board composition<sup>13</sup>

An effective Board both directs and ensures proper control of the company and its management. As per 1.3. Commentary, the Board takes the big picture perspective, leading, monitoring, and supervising the management. It should gain the confidence of management and act as a sounding board and advisor, but must also have the collective courage to challenge management when necessary.

A Board can discharge its direction and control functions only if its members have the appropriate knowledge, skills and experience. The latter are often related to the business of the company but must also include a variety of other skills such as accounting, legal, organisational.

There is also an appreciation that Boards need to contain a range of personalities, characters, skills and backgrounds if they are to function successfully. Inclusive and diverse Boards are more likely to be effective Boards, better able to understand their customers and stakeholders and to benefit from fresh perspectives, new ideas, vigorous challenge and broad experience. This in turn leads to better decision making.<sup>14</sup> The Board Chairman plays a key role in creating an inclusive Board that welcomes diversity and promotes challenge. These criteria should be considered in the nomination of directors (addressed in 4. Nomination) and in the evaluation of the Board (addressed in 3.3. Commentary).

Gender equality in particular has gained a lot of attention recently with business initiatives such as the 30% Club and the introduction of quotas or target in France, Norway, Spain, Belgium, the Netherlands, the United Kingdom and Italy. A European Commission proposal for a directive<sup>15</sup> sets a quantitative objective of at least 40% representation for each gender among non-executive directors (supervisory board members in a dual board system) by 2020 (or 2018 for State-owned undertakings).

Executive and non-executive directors

Executive directors<sup>16</sup>

Executive directors are members of one-tiered Boards who, in their executive capacity, are responsible for the day-to-day running and management of the company. They have the same duties as other members of the Board. When engaged in Board business, these duties and responsibilities extend to the entire business, not just the part that is covered by their individual executive roles<sup>17</sup>. As Board members, they are directly accountable to shareholders and their contribution to the Board's work should be frequently evaluated (see 3.3. Commentary).

Non-executive directors (NEDs)

A non-executive director is a member of the Board who does not engage in the day-to-day management of the organisation. This means the non-executive director can bring a creative contribution to the Board by providing objective criticism and play a valuable role in monitoring management.

<sup>15</sup> The proposed Directive is being discussed among Member States in the Council. Under this new framework, companies would have to disclose the qualification criteria applied in case of a challenge to an appointment. The Commission's proposal applies to companies listed on stock exchanges in the EU Member States, but excludes all small and medium-sized companies (SMEs), even if they are listed on stock exchanges. For more information, please see http://ec.europa.eu/justice/newsroom/gender-equality/news/121114\_en.htm and http://ec.europa.eu/justice/gender-equality/files/womenonboards/wob-factsheet\_2015-04\_en.pdf

<sup>16</sup> Further information on the role of the Chairman can be found at the OECD and the Financial Reporting Council. See OECD Principles of Corporate Governance, available via <http://www.oecd.org/daf/ca/corporategovernanceprinciples/31557724.pdf>, pp. 24-25. <sup>17</sup> This principle is captured by Romanian law (various provisions are relevant, including Art. 142 and 144<sup>2</sup> (1) of Law No. 31/1990 on companies)

Independence of non-executive directors<sup>18</sup>

The Board effectively represents the interests of the company as a whole. The NEDs' independence (as per the Code provision A.4<sup>19</sup>) allows them to be objective and evaluate the performance and economic interests of the company without any conflict of interest or undue influence of interested parties.

Relationships with shareholders can be defined as any relationship as per the IAS24 standard (see section C.3 on related-party transactions).

The Code contains detailed criteria for vetting a director's independence. Only non-executive directors can be considered independent. According to the Code, they should not receive additional remuneration or other advantages such as benefits in kind.

The composition of the Board should be refreshed from time to time. This often leads to independent and innovative thinking. Best practice Boards aim at balancing experience and knowledge of the company with a fresh perspective. In some jurisdictions a director is not considered independent once he/she has been on the Board of a company for a number of years (nine years in the UK and no more than three mandates in Romania).

However, the grounds for independence stem not only from compliance with provisions A.4.1-A.4.9 but through the directors' independence of character and judgement. A reputation for integrity and the respect of the marketplace is often read as an additional signal of independence. Significant reliance on income derived by one's Board seat might also put a limitation on independence. Therefore, the submission of a declaration of independence and any changes in his/her status, as per provision A.4, is essential. This declaration should specify whether there are relationships or circumstances which are likely to affect, or could appear to affect, the director's judgement. If the director still considers himself as independent notwithstanding the existence of these relationships or circumstances, he should explain why.

<sup>19</sup> Criteria for assessing independence of directors are also provided by Art.138<sup>2</sup> (2) of Law No.31/1990 on companies. The criteria in the Code provision A.4.4 is stricter than the corresponding criteria in the law, while the Code provision A.4.8 is less strict than the corresponding legal provision limiting independence to three mandates of maximum four years (see lett.h) of Art. 138<sup>2</sup> (2) of Law No. 31/1990 on companies).

3. Board functioning<sup>20</sup>

3.1. General principles

The Board should ensure that a formal, rigorous and transparent procedure is put into place regarding the appointment of new members to the Board. All members of the Board should be able to allocate sufficient time to the company to discharge their responsibilities effectively. The Board should ensure that it is appropriately informed to enable it to discharge its duties.

BVB Corporate Governance Code, page 3

3.2. Comply or explain provisions

A.7. The company should appoint a Board secretary responsible for supporting the work of the Board.

A.8. The corporate governance statement should inform on whether an evaluation of the Board has taken place under the leadership of the Chairman or the nomination committee and, if it has, summarize key action points and changes resulting from it. The company should have a policy/guidance regarding the evaluation of the Board containing the purpose, criteria and frequency of the evaluation process.

A.9. The corporate governance statement should contain information on the number of meetings of the Board and the committees during the past year, attendance by directors (in person and in absentia) and a report of the Board and committees on their activities.

3.3. Commentary

Board Secretary<sup>21</sup>

The Chairman creates the conditions for overall Board and individual director effectiveness by:

- Demonstrating the highest standards of integrity and probity;
- Setting clear expectations concerning the company's culture, values and behaviours;
- Setting a Board agenda<sup>22</sup> with the help of the Board Secretary<sup>23</sup>;

<sup>20</sup>Further information on Board functioning in other jurisdictions can be found at the Institute of Directors and the Financial Reporting Council. See Institute of Directors, available via <http://www.iod.com/guidance/publications/the-effective-board>, pp. 5-11. Financial Reporting Council, available via <https://www.frc.org.uk/getattachment/c9ce2814-2806-4bca-a179-e390ecbed841/Guidance-on-Board-Effectiveness.aspx>.

<sup>21</sup>A guidance on the role of the Board Secretary in UK is provided by the Institute of Chartered Secretaries and Administrators, available via <https://www.icsa.org.uk/assets/files/pdfs/081020%20-%20Corp%20Gov%20role%20of%20co%20sec.pdf>

- Ensuring a timely flow of high-quality supporting information<sup>24</sup>;
- Ensuring that the Board has effective decision-making processes and applies sufficient challenge to major proposals;
- Ensuring that the Board determines the nature and extent of significant risks the company is willing to accept in the implementation of its strategy; and
- Ensuring effective communication with shareholders<sup>25</sup> and other stakeholders.

He should be assisted by a competent, suitably qualified, and experienced Board Secretary, who attends Board meetings. All Board members should have access to the services of the Board Secretary (a senior employee or attorney), whose role is to provide practical support to the Chairman and other Board members, both as a group and individually, and to ensure that the Board complies with internal rules as well as relevant laws and regulations.

Under the direction of the Chairman, the Board Secretary's responsibilities include ensuring good information flow between the Board and its committees, as well as between senior management and the Board. Consequently, although not expressly provided for in the Code, it is good practice for the Board Secretary (or his/her nominee) to act as Secretary to the Board committees. It is not good practice for the internal auditor or an independent NED to provide the service of Secretary. The Secretary's responsibilities include facilitating induction and assisting with professional development of Board members as required, in addition to ensuring the effective organisation of shareholder meetings, facilitating good communication between the shareholders and the Board, and ensuring that statutory and regulatory requirements are met. More information about the role of the Company Secretary is disclosed in Appendix 4.

Minutes of every meeting record the proceedings as well as the decisions of the Board and its committees.<sup>26</sup> These minutes are circulated and approved at the next Board or committee meeting and kept by the Board Secretary.

Board evaluation<sup>27</sup>

Boards continually need to assess their balance of skills, monitor and improve their effectiveness, maximising strengths, and highlight areas for further development. This generally takes the form of an annual self-evaluation of the effectiveness of the Board and its committees. The evaluation often consists of a questionnaire and one-to-one discussions, led by the Chairman of the Board and is usually assisted by the Board Secretary. Many best-practice Boards explicitly evaluate the performance of their Chairmen, and in some countries the evaluation also covers the performance and contribution of individual Board members.

Many EU Codes provide for externally facilitated Board evaluations every three years. This allows the Board to get an unbiased view of its performance and effectiveness. Regular Board <sup>22</sup> The duty of the Chairman to establish the Board agenda is expressly provided by Romanian law. (see Art. 141(2) of Law No. 31/1990 on companies).

<sup>24</sup> The duty of the Chairman to ensure that Board members are adequately informed about the points on the agenda is also a legal requirement (see Art. 141(2) of Law No. 31/1990 on companies)

<sup>25</sup> The duty of the Chairman to coordinate the activity of the Board and to report to the general meeting of shareholders is also a legal requirement (see Art. 140<sup>1</sup>(4) of Law No. 31/1990 on companies).

<sup>26</sup> Recording the order of deliberations and the adopted decisions in minutes is a legal requirement.

<sup>27</sup> See Institute of Chartered Secretaries and Administrators, available via <https://www.icsa.org.uk/products-and-services/icsa-board-evaluation> evaluations are now a standard feature of governance in the majority of EU-listed companies and are expected by investors. On average, 70% of Boards of listed companies undertake a formal review annually – this figure is higher in the United Kingdom (100%), Sweden (87%) and Finland (81%)<sup>28</sup>.

It is considered good practice to disclose a summary of the key action points resulting from the Board evaluation. These are often part of the Chairman's narrative report. An example of disclosure is available in the Manual, Section A.

Number of meetings and Director time commitments<sup>29</sup>

The frequency of Board meetings depends on such elements as the complexity of the organisation and on the number of Board committees established to discuss specific issues and report to the Board on their discussions and proposals. In the usual course of business, a Board should meet every quarter, as a minimum,<sup>30</sup> in order to discharge its recurrent responsibilities and deal with exceptional events. In a comparative study of 376 European companies<sup>31</sup>, Board had on average 8 meetings a year; Audit Committees met on average 5 times a year and Nomination Committees 4 times a year.

For relatively simple organisations where Boards meet on a quarterly basis, a director should expect to dedicate at least ten days per year to the Board. Membership in a Board committee can easily add four/six days to a director's workload.

For more complex organisations, such as banks, the time requirement can be much higher. Banks like HSBC report workloads of 30-36 days a year.<sup>32</sup>

It is best practice for Boards adopt a schedule of meetings and a 12-month agenda at the beginning of every calendar year, in order to make sure Board members pencil in the meeting in their agenda and to make sure management knows that they have to report at a certain time. This schedule may be reviewed according to the company's needs to ensure that the Board fulfils its responsibilities and adequately considers all matters submitted to it for consideration.

Board and committee reporting activities

Provision A.9 states that the annual Corporate Governance statement should contain a report on the Board and the committees' activities during the year under review. This implies that the Board should report on how it exercised its responsibilities during the year. A detailed list of the information to disclose is available in the Manual (see Appendix 2) for corporate governance reporting.

4.2. Comply or explain provisions

A.11. The Board of Premium Tier companies should set up a nomination committee formed of non-executives, which will lead the process for Board appointments and make recommendations to the Board. The majority of the members of the nomination committee should be independent.

4.3. Commentary

Appointment of new members of the Board

A critical task of the Board is succession planning at Board level and maintaining the right balance of required attributes, according to Board composition principles.

In best practice companies, the Board adopts a nomination policy, implemented by the Nomination Committee, in order to ensure an effective and transparent procedure for the nomination of Board members. The nomination policy refers to:

- Selection criteria. In this respect, many best-practice companies maintain a “matrix” of skills required and periodically review this to determine if there are gaps in current Board composition;
- Appointment procedures for Board members;
- Diversity policy of the Board including gender balance (to fulfil the need for diversity as mentioned in 2.3 Commentary);
- Periodic review of the size and the composition of the Board;
- Evaluation of the balance of skills, views, competences, knowledge, qualifications and experience relevant to business objectives, and a description of the role and capabilities required for a particular appointment (a per 3.3 Commentary);

- Process for nominee identification and selection.

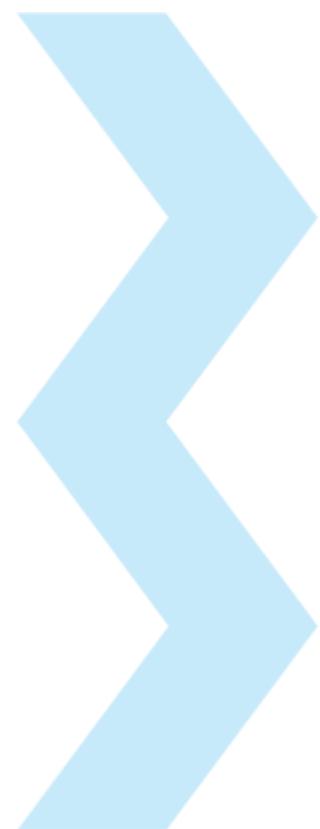

In Romania, the term of each mandate is limited to four years. Most best-practice companies adopt Board mandates of no more than three years in order to ensure accountability of Board members to shareholders and provide the possibility of periodic renewal of the Board. Terms can be staggered to avoid replacement of the entire body at one general meeting and thus ensure orderly succession of Board members over time.

Nomination Committee

The Nomination Committee is a Board committee that supports and advises the Board in matters related to Board effectiveness and the appointment of Board members. Given their focus on Board composition, stand-alone Nomination Committees are often chaired by the Chairman of the Board.

The Nomination Committee assists the Board by establishing the principles for the selection of candidates to the Board of Directors, selecting candidates for the election or re-election to the Board of Directors and preparing proposals for the Board of Directors' decision.

More information about the Nomination Committee's purpose, composition, powers, responsibilities, and functioning is disclosed in Appendix 3: Nomination committee terms of reference.

1.3. Commentary

Risk management and internal control system

The Board is ultimately responsible for overseeing all risks related to the financial and operational performance of the company. In discharging this role, the Board should ensure that the company establishes an effective risk management framework for the identification, monitoring, and management of risks. Such a framework would usually require that management:

- Identify key risks, assessing and tracking these by potential impact and likelihood of occurrence (e.g. through a risk register);
- Establish organisational structures which provide clear ownership of risks within the company;
- Establish key risk indicators to monitor the company's performance against risk types (e.g. operational risk, human resources risk, legal risk etc.); and
- Report periodically to the Board on the status of material risks, including responses taken by the company to manage these risks.

The Board should ensure that this risk management framework is complemented by an internal control system which provides an adequate level of policies, procedures, and processes for the mitigation of the risks and the achievement of company objectives. The Board of a listed company may consider adopting the three lines of defence in their internal controls system (See commentary on "system of internal controls" in 2.3 below).

In all this, a key responsibility of the Board is to set sufficient controls to protect against financial reporting risks, ensuring that all financial reports prepared by management fairly represent the company's financial position.

Audit Committee

The Audit Committee should support the Board in overseeing the internal control system, particularly the efficacy of financial reporting. In the EU<sup>35</sup>, the existence of an Audit Committee is a requirement for all listed companies and other public interest entities<sup>36</sup>.

The Code meets the EU minimum requirements by requiring the appointment of at least one accounting or auditing expert on the Audit Committee.<sup>37</sup> The experts' participation ensures that the committee has the skill to be the leading control body within the firm. This expert should have the following attributes:

<sup>35</sup> Article 39, Directive 2014/56/EU amending Directive 2006/43/EC on statutory audits of annual accounts and consolidated accounts.

<sup>36</sup> Establishment of an Audit Committee is also a mandatory legal requirement for Romanian companies listed on the regulated market (see Art. 47 of the Government Emergency Ordinance no. 90/2008 on the statutory audit of annual financial statements and the consolidated annual financial statements and public interest surveillance of the accounting profession., in conjunction with art. 34 of the Accounting Law no. 82/1991);

<sup>37</sup> Romanian law requires that at least one member of the Audit Committee have auditing and/or accounting expertise (see Art. 140<sup>2</sup>(2) of Law No. 31/1990 on companies, as well as art. 47 (1) of the Government Emergency Ordinance no. 90/2008 on the statutory audit of annual financial statements and the consolidated annual financial statements and public interest surveillance of the accounting profession ).

- An understanding of generally accepted accounting principles and financial statements;
- The ability to assess the general application of such principles in connection with the accounting for estimates, accruals, and reserves;
- Experience in preparing, auditing, analysing, and evaluating financial statements that present a breadth and level of complexity of accounting issues;
- An understanding of internal controls and procedures for financial reporting; and
- An understanding of Audit Committee functions.<sup>38</sup>

Nevertheless, the Audit Committee as a whole should display a mix of skills which correspond to the scope of responsibilities for the committee. Such skills may include industry expertise, understanding of the company's specific value drivers, risk management knowledge, regulatory knowledge, and compliance experience.

Having an appropriate collective skillset should be supported by the presence of a majority of independent directors on the committee. This will allow the committee to sufficiently probe and challenge management across various matters and provide reasonable assurance to shareholders (especially minority shareholders) that financial accounts, company's assets or related-party transactions are overseen independently. In most best-practice large listed firms, Audit Committees are composed exclusively of independent directors: Out of the 376 European companies analysed by HayGroup<sup>39</sup>, the median had a fully independent Audit Committee. While the Code does not require this, it should be noted that independence of the Audit Committee is often a key investor requirement and, in some important trend-setting jurisdictions (e.g. the US, UK etc.), it is mandatory or highly expected.

More information about the Audit Committee's responsibilities, composition and functioning is available in Appendix 2: Audit Committee terms of reference.

2. Enforcing accountability for internal control<sup>40</sup>

2.1. General principle

The company should arrange for internal audits to independently evaluate, on a regular basis, the reliability and efficiency of the risk management and internal control system and the corporate governance practices. The Board of Directors or Supervisory Board, as the case may be, should set up an independent audit committee capable of ensuring the integrity of financial reporting and of the internal control system, including the internal and external audit processes.

BVB Corporate Governance Code, page 6

2.2. Comply or explain provisions

B.3. Among its responsibilities, the audit committee should undertake an annual assessment of the system of internal control.

B.4. The assessment should consider the effectiveness and scope of the internal audit function, the adequacy of risk management and internal control reports to the audit committee of the Board, management's responsiveness and effectiveness in dealing with identified internal control failings or weaknesses and their submission of relevant reports to the Board.

B.5. The audit committee should review conflicts of interests in transactions of the company and its subsidiaries with related parties.

B.6. The audit committee should evaluate the efficiency of the internal control system and risk management system.

B.7. The audit committee should monitor the application of statutory and generally accepted standards of internal auditing. The audit committee should receive and evaluate the reports of the internal audit team.

B.8. Whenever the Code mentions reviews or analysis to be exercised by the Audit Committee, these should be followed by cyclical (at least annual), or ad-hoc reports to be submitted to the Board afterwards.

B.9. The internal audits should be carried out by a separate structural division (internal audit department) within the company or by retaining an independent third-party entity.

B.10. To ensure the fulfilment of the core functions of the internal audit department, it should report functionally to the Board via the audit committee. For administrative purposes and in the scope related to the obligations of the management to monitor and mitigate risks, it should report directly to the chief executive officer.

2.3. Commentary

System of internal controls

Internal control is defined as a “process, effected by an entity's Board [...], management and other personnel, designed to provide reasonable assurance regarding the achievement of objectives in the following categories:

- Effectiveness and efficiency of operations.
- Reliability of financial reporting.
- Compliance with applicable laws and regulations.”<sup>41</sup>

In other words, a control is any action taken by the Board, management, and staff to manage risks which deter the company from meeting its established objectives and goals. The company’s management is directly responsible for developing, operating, and monitoring the system of internal controls. The Board, via its Audit Committee, should seek assurance that management is meeting these responsibilities.

To provide further assurance, the Board may find it useful to adopt the three lines of defence approach when structuring the functioning of the internal control system:

- 1st line of defence – business operations: General business, frontline, and sales staff are responsible for responding to and dealing with risks that emerge as part of day-to-day operations in accordance with the company’s policies;
- 2nd line of defence – oversight functions: Risk and other support staff provide guidance, as required, to frontline staff on the implementation of policies regarding the management of risks and actively monitor the execution of policies by frontline staff;
- 3rd line of defence – internal audit: The internal audit function responsible for providing independent, systematic, and disciplined audits of the company’s approach to managing risks to the company’s objectives (See “internal audit function” below).

In line with this, the Audit Committee should consider assessing the adequacy of roles, responsibilities, accountabilities, authorities, competencies, and organizational arrangements along the three lines of defence in order to determine whether the internal control system remains fit-for-purpose.

Internal audit function

In keeping with best practice, the Code requires the existence of an internal audit function in listed companies.

An internal audit function provides objective and independent reasonable assurance to the governing bodies that the company’s organisation, policies, and processes are working effectively and as expected. In this regard, internal audit also provides assurances regarding the effective implementation of the risk management framework and the internal control system<sup>42</sup>. Objectivity requires that internal auditors are not influenced by and do not subordinate their judgment on audit matters to others. For this reason, the effectiveness of internal audit depends on its operational independence from other business functions and the company's management. Nevertheless, the Head of Internal Audit works with the organisation's management and other assurance providers to develop and deliver risk-based plans. Internal auditors identify, analyse, evaluate, and document evidence, on which to base their conclusions.

The internal audit should report functionally to the Board (usually via its Audit Committee) and administratively to CEO. This essentially gives the function the required “teeth” to the Board to perform its control functions.

Functional reporting to the Board (via its Audit Committee) means that the Board:

- Approves the internal audit function's charter;
- Approves the internal audit risk assessment and related audit plan;
- Receives communications from the Head of Internal Audit on the results of internal audit activities and other matters that he/she determines are necessary;
- Approves all decisions regarding the appointment or removal of the Head of Internal Audit;
- Approves the annual remuneration of the Head of Internal Audit;
- Makes appropriate inquiries to determine whether the internal audit function has sufficient scope and budget to execute its responsibilities.

Administrative reporting to the CEO means that the CEO:

- Oversees budgeting matters regarding the internal audit function;
- Ensures an adequate human resources administration system for the function, including personnel evaluations;
- Ensures appropriate internal communications and flow of information;
- Oversees the administration of the organization's internal policies and procedures.

In spite of this, it is good practice for the Head of Internal Audit to keep the CEO informed of key audit findings particularly in relation to the adequacy of the company's approach to implementing the risk management framework so that key issues are adequately addressed by the CEO and management. However, reports from the Head of Internal Audit to the CEO should be at the discretion of the Head of Internal Audit and the information in such reports should also be shared with the Audit Committee.

It is noteworthy that some companies in Europe choose to outsource internal audit to specialised providers partly or fully. This usually applies to organisations of a small size for which it may not make economic sense to have an in-house internal audit function. It may also apply when particular audits require specific skills which cannot easily be developed internally (e.g. IT, business continuity).

Where the internal audit function is outsourced, the Audit Committee should annually consider

<sup>42</sup> See <https://iia.org.uk/about-us/what-is-internal-audit/#members> and <https://iia.org.uk/resources/global-guidance/international-standards/>

whether there is a need to establish an in-house function and make a recommendation of this nature to the Board.

Audit Committees should always ensure that there is coordination between the internal and external auditors.

3. Ensure sound management of related party transactions

3.1. General principle

The company will ensure that all related party transactions are considered on their merits in a manner that ensures independence and the protection of the interests of the company, compliant with the restrictions set out in related legislation and fairly disclosed to shareholders and potential investors. The definition of related parties follows that of International Accounting Standard 24.

BVB Corporate Governance Code, page 6

3.2. Comply or explain provisions

B.5. The Audit Committee should review conflicts of interests in transactions of the company and its subsidiaries with related parties.

B.9. No shareholder may be given undue preference over other shareholders with regard to transactions and agreements made by the company with shareholders and their related parties.

B.10. The Board should adopt a policy ensuring that any transaction of the company with any of the companies with which it has close relations, that is equal to or more than 5% of the net assets of the company (as stated in the latest financial report), should be approved by the Board following an obligatory opinion of the Board's Audit Committee, and fairly disclosed to the shareholders and potential investors, to the extent that such transactions fall under the category of events subject to disclosure requirements.

3.3. Commentary<sup>43</sup>

Sistemul de control intern

A related party transaction is essentially a transaction that yields a financial benefit to a related party. Financial benefits can arise through various transactions such as investments, provision of credit, asset purchases, or service contracts. A related party is a person or entity that, by virtue of its position, authority, ownership, or relationship, has scope for direct or indirect influence on the company's decision making.

The International Financial Reporting Standards provides, in the International Accounting Standard 24 (IAS24), a widely-accepted definition for the term “related party”:

“A related party is a person or entity that is related to the entity that is preparing its financial statements (in this Standard referred to as the ‘reporting entity’).

(a) A person or a close member of that person’s family is related to a reporting entity if that person:

- (i) has control or joint control over the reporting entity;
- (ii) has significant influence over the reporting entity; or
- (iii) is a member of the key management personnel of the reporting entity or of a parent of the reporting entity.

(b) An entity is related to a reporting entity if any of the following conditions apply:

- (i) The entity and the reporting entity are members of the same group (which means that each parent, subsidiary and fellow subsidiary is related to the others).
- (ii) One entity is an associate or joint venture of the other entity (or an associate or joint venture of a member of a group of which the other entity is a member).
- (iii) Both entities are joint ventures of the same third party.
- (iv) One entity is a joint venture of a third entity and the other entity is an associate of the third entity.
- (v) The entity is a post-employment benefit plan for the benefit of employees of either the reporting entity or an entity related to the reporting entity. If the reporting entity is itself such a plan, the sponsoring employers are also related to the reporting entity.
- (vi) The entity is controlled or jointly controlled by a person identified in (a).
- (vii) A person identified in (a)(i) has significant influence over the entity or is a member of the key management personnel of the entity (or of a parent of the entity).

Where:

Close members of the family of a person are those family members who may be expected to influence, or be influenced by, that person in their dealings with the entity and include:

- (a) that person’s children and spouse or domestic partner;
- (b) children of that person’s spouse or domestic partner; and
- (c) dependants of that person or that person’s spouse or domestic partner.

Key management personnel are those persons having authority and responsibility for planning, directing and controlling the activities of the entity, directly or indirectly, including any director (whether executive or otherwise) of that entity.

Significant influence is the power to participate in the financial and operating policy decisions of an entity, but is not control over those policies. Significant influence may be gained by share ownership, statute or agreement.

In the context of this Standard, the following are not related parties:

- (a) two entities simply because they have a director or other member of key management personnel in common or because a member of the key management personnel of one entity has significant influence over the other entity.
- (b) two venturers simply because they share joint control over a joint venture.
- (c)
  - (i) providers of finance,
  - (ii) trade unions,
  - (iii) public utilities, and
  - (iv) departments and agencies of a government that does not control, jointly control or significantly influence the reporting entity,
  - (v) simply by virtue of their normal dealings with an entity (even though they may affect the freedom of action of an entity or participate in its decision-making process).
- (d) a customer, supplier, franchisor, distributor or general agent with whom an entity transacts a significant volume of business, simply by virtue of the resulting economic dependence.”

Regarding related parties and related party transactions, best practice companies do the following:

- Establish a publicly available related party transaction policy: Best practice companies develop and make publicly available on their website a related party transactions policy which outlines the company’s approach to identifying, reviewing, approving, monitoring, and reporting related party transaction.
- Develop clear definitions for related parties and related party transactions: Best practice companies adopt definitions for related parties, which align with the International Accounting Standard 24, and appropriately cover:
  - (i) Directors;
  - (ii) Senior management;
  - (iii) Related corporations (e.g. parent companies, holding companies of parent company, subsidiaries etc.);
  - (iv) Substantial shareholders (usually defined at a 5% ownership threshold); and
  - (v) Family members of (i), (ii) and (iv).

- Clearly outline certain definitions connected to the “related party” definition: For “senior management”, best practice companies explicitly define relevant individuals to include those who
  - Report to the Board or the CEO;
  - Are part of the Executive Committee;
  - Report to the Executive Committee;
  - Have significant authority to approve transactions.

For “family members”, best practice companies include all family relationships up to the 3rd degree. Family degrees are depicted below:

1st degree	Spouse, sibling, parents, children
2nd degree	Cousins, in-laws, uncles, aunties, nephews, nieces
3rd degree	Grandparents, grandchildren

- Create frameworks for recording interests, and identifying and notifying conflicts: Best practice companies maintain a register of all related parties and their interests. These registers are updated at least once a year and as soon as new information arises. Directors and management would be required to make prompt declarations to the company when they themselves or their family members have material interest in a transaction with the company.
- Establish clear delegation of authorities regarding the approval of related party transactions: Best practice companies set materiality thresholds above which transactions with related parties require prior approval from the Audit Committee, the Board, and shareholders.
- Restrict the ability of related parties to participate in decision making: In best practice companies, related parties with an interest in the transaction under consideration do not participate in any discussions, deliberations, or decision-making on the transaction other than to provide necessary information directly requested to facilitate a decision.
- Require Board super-majority approval for related party transactions: Best practice companies usually require the consent of at least three-quarters of eligible independent directors for related party transactions to be approved.
- Seek independent advice where necessary: Best practice companies develop processes for seeking independent external advice where appropriate to facilitate the review of related-party transactions. Such advice may, for example, be connected to the evaluation of the interest of the related party in the transaction or the market valuation of assets involved in the transaction.
- Ensure adequate reporting and disclosures on related parties: Best practice companies frame when, how, and to whom related-party transactions should be reported and disclosed<sup>44</sup>. While the Code provides for a 5% net assets threshold over which related party transactions should be disclosed, some Romanian companies might chose to lower this threshold and disclose lower value transactions.

<sup>44</sup> There are various Romanian legal provisions regulating the definition, approval and disclosure of related party transactions (See Art. 2 pt. 22 and Art. 225 of Law no. 297/2004 on capital market, art. 113 letter G para. (3-6) of the CNVM Regulation No. 1/2006 on issuers and operations with negotiable securities).

Fair rewards and motivation

1. General principles

The level of remuneration should be sufficient to attract, retain and motivate skillful and experienced people as members of the Board and the management. The Board should ensure transparency related to remuneration matters. The shareholders should be provided with relevant information in order to understand the principles applied by the company regarding the remuneration policy, which is based on fair rewards and motivation for Board members, and for the CEO or Management Board.

A company should have a remuneration policy and rules defining that policy. It should determine the form, structure and level of remuneration of members of the Board, the CEO and when applicable, members of the Management Board.

BVB Corporate Governance Code, page 8

2. Comply or explain provisions

C.1. The company should publish a remuneration policy on its website and include in its annual report a remuneration statement on the implementation of this policy during the annual period under review.

The remuneration policy should be formulated in such a way that allows stakeholders to understand the principles and rationale behind the remuneration of the members of the Board and the CEO, as well as of the members of the Management Board in two-tier board systems. It should describe the remuneration governance and decision-making process, detail the components of executive remuneration (i.e. salaries, annual bonus, long term stock-linked incentives, benefits in kind, pensions, and others) and describe each component's purpose, principles and assumptions (including the general performance criteria related to any form of variable remuneration). In addition, the remuneration policy should disclose the duration of the executive's contract and their notice period and eventual compensation for revocation without cause.

The remuneration report should present the implementation of the remuneration policy vis-à-vis the persons identified in the remuneration policy during the annual period under review.

Any essential change of the remuneration policy should be published on the corporate website in a timely fashion.

3. Commentary<sup>45</sup>

Remuneration policy

A remuneration policy outlines how the Board and executive officers are paid for working for the organisation. The remuneration provision of the Code (C1) states that the remuneration policy should be formulated in a way that allows stakeholders to understand the principles and rationale behind the remuneration of:

- The members of the Board;
- The CEO; and
- The members of the Management Board in two-tier board systems.

It is best practice to distinguish between the Board fee structure and executive officers' remuneration structure to avoid confusion.

Executive remuneration in Romania is still predominantly based on cash, encouraged by the flat income tax rate<sup>46</sup>. However, companies, driven by multinational companies, have started to include other components in executive officers' remuneration such as non-cash remuneration, short or long term awards.

The components can be explained as follows:

- The base salary is the annual fixed cash salary that executives receive for performing their duties;
- Non-cash remuneration typically takes the forms of shares or nil cost share options;
- Variable remuneration can be paid in cash or in non-cash awards. It can be short-term, such as an annual bonus based on the executive's performance during the year under review, or longer-term (i.e. typically paid over 3 to 5 years). Longer-term awards can be for example the deferred part of a bonus but can also include awards that vest according to indicators measured in the future (e.g. the EPS in year 3, 4 and 5 after the award of shares). The description of the scheme usually includes their maximum award and performance criteria.
- The remuneration policy should include the following:
- A description of the fees received by each Board member and additional fees for the Chairman, Vice-Chairman, and committees;

- The components of executive officers' remuneration described above and how variable remuneration is allocated to executive officers, including the cap of the remuneration scheme, and the qualitative and quantitative performance criteria used;
- The main provisions of the executive officers' service contracts, including their duration and company liabilities on termination (including in the case of a takeover).

The Code also underlines the importance of reporting essential changes to the remuneration policy. This includes any changes to the variable remuneration schemes, including their performance criteria or targets, and service contracts. This also includes changes in NEDs' fee structure (e.g. adding fees per meeting or changing additional fees for the Chairman).

Remuneration report

On the other hand, the remuneration report, as per Provision C.1, "should present the implementation of the remuneration policy vis-à-vis the persons identified in the remuneration policy during the annual period under review."

It presents the actual remuneration of Board members and executive officers during the year under review and will typically include:

- The amount and changes to the total NED remuneration envelope;
- An overview of the evolution of executive officers' total remuneration and an explanation for any exceptional awards;
- The total remuneration paid to each executive officer during the year, broken down into base salary, benefits, bonus, share or options awards, and eventual severance payments; and
- The shares and stock options granted to each executive over the previous years and their vesting, exercise and expiry dates, options price, as well as how many rights have been exercised.

More information about disclosures in the remuneration report is available in the Manual, Part I. Section C.

Remuneration committee

Another key task of the Board is ensuring that executive officers' remuneration is set at the right level and that the company has appropriately balanced incentives in place to attract and keep the talent it requires for its operations. Whilst the Code does not require the creation of a Remuneration Committee, the establishment of a Remuneration Committee was recommended by the European Commission in 2009 and is a prominent best practice in Europe: out of 376 European companies analysed by a study of HayGroup<sup>47</sup>, 97% had a Remuneration Committee.<sup>48</sup>

Some companies still operate combined Nomination and Remuneration Committees, which could be envisaged under the Romanian framework. However, in companies with larger Boards, a separate Remuneration Committee would ensure that Board members with experience in managing people and structuring incentives in large organisations contribute the maximum value possible to the Board. Although both the Nomination and Remuneration Committees focus on HR issues, the Nomination Committee will usually focus on Non-Executive Directors (see Appendix 3) whilst the Remuneration Committee will mainly focus on Executive Officers' remuneration.

The Remuneration Committee is usually responsible for:

- Proposing the remuneration of individual executive directors, including bonuses, incentive payments, and share options to the Board;
- Reviewing and making proposals to the Board on the total annual package of variable remuneration in the company;
- Reviewing and making proposals to the Board (and, via the Board, to the general meeting of shareholders when required) on the stock option and/or share award programmes;
- Proposing targets for performance-related monetary remuneration or targets related to stock-options or the granting of shares;
- Regularly reviewing the salary of executive directors and other remuneration elements, including severance payments and pension arrangements; and
- Making proposals to the Board on any business policy related to remuneration; and
- Reviewing the annual remuneration report.

Section D

Building value through investor relations

1. General principles

The company should disseminate the most important information both in Romanian and English, to enable Romanian and foreign investors to have access to the same information at the same time.

A company should do its best to enable its shareholders to participate in general meetings, aiming at using electronic communication means through (a) live broadcast of general meetings and/or (b) live bilateral communication where shareholders may express themselves during a general meeting from a location other than that of the general meeting, as long as this is in line with legislation regarding data processing.

A company should aim to provide for an electronic voting system at general meetings, including remote electronic voting.

BVB Corporate Governance Code, page 9

2. Comply or explain provisions

D.1. The company should have an Investor Relations function - indicated, by person (s) responsible or an organizational unit, to the general public. In addition to information required by legal provisions, the company should include on its corporate website a dedicated Investor Relations section, both in Romanian and English, with all relevant information of interest for investors, including:

D.1.1. Principal corporate regulations: the articles of association, general shareholders' meeting procedures.

D.1.2. Professional CVs of the members of its governing bodies, a Board member's other professional commitments, including executive and non-executive Board positions in companies and not-for-profit institutions;

D.1.3. Current reports and periodic reports (quarterly, semi-annual and annual reports) – at least as provided at item D.8 – including current reports with detailed information related to non-compliance with the present Code;

D.1.4. Information related to general meetings of shareholders: the agenda and supporting materials; the procedure approved for the election of Board members; the rationale for the proposal of candidates for the election to the Board, together with their professional CVs; shareholders' questions related to the agenda and the company's answers, including the decisions taken;

D.1.5. Information on corporate events, such as payment of dividends and other distributions to shareholders, or other events leading to the acquisition or limitation of rights of a shareholder, including the deadlines and principles applied to such operations. Such information should be published within a timeframe that enables investors to make investment decisions;

D.1.6. The name and contact data of a person who should be able to provide knowledgeable information on request;

D.1.7. Corporate presentations (e.g. IR presentations, quarterly results presentations, etc.), financial statements (quarterly, semi-annual, annual), auditor reports and annual reports.

D.2. A company should have an annual cash distribution or dividend policy, proposed by the CEO or the Management Board and adopted by the Board, as a set of directions the company intends to follow regarding the distribution of net profit. The annual cash distribution or dividend policy principles should be published on the corporate website.

D.3. A company should have adopted a policy with respect to forecasts, whether they are distributed or not. Forecasts means the quantified conclusions of studies aimed at determining the total impact of a list of factors related to a future period (so called assumptions): by nature such a task is based upon a high level of uncertainty, with results sometimes significantly differing from forecasts initially presented. The policy should provide for the frequency, period envisaged, and content of forecasts. Forecasts, if published, may only be part of annual, semi-annual or quarterly reports. The forecast policy should be published on the corporate website.

D.4. The rules of general meetings of shareholders should not restrict the participation of shareholders in general meetings and the exercising of their rights. Amendments of the rules should take effect, at the earliest, as of the next general meeting of shareholders.

D.5. The external auditors should attend the shareholders' meetings when their reports are presented there.

D.6. The Board should present to the annual general meeting of shareholders a brief assessment of the internal controls and significant risk management system, as well as opinions on issues subject to resolution at the general meeting.

D.7. Any professional, consultant, expert or financial analyst may participate in the shareholders' meeting upon prior invitation from the Chairman of the Board. Accredited journalists may also participate in the general meeting of shareholders, unless the Chairman of the Board decides otherwise.

D.8. The quarterly and semi-annual financial reports should include information in both Romanian and English regarding the key drivers influencing the change in sales, operating profit, net profit and other relevant financial indicators, both on quarter-on-quarter and year-on-year terms.

D.9. A company should organize at least two meetings/conference calls with analysts and investors each year. The information presented on these occasions should be published in the IR section of the company website at the time of the meetings/conference calls.

D.10. If a company supports various forms of artistic and cultural expression, sport activities, educational or scientific activities, and considers the resulting impact on the innovativeness and competitiveness of the company part of its business mission and development strategy, it should publish the policy guiding its activity in this area.

3. Commentary

Investor relations

For listed companies, good corporate governance cannot exist without regular information on company performance, risks, and governance, as well as the communication of this information from the company to the shareholders. To this effect the Code recommends the existence of two channels of communication: an informative website<sup>49</sup> and an investor relations (IR) department with the exclusive responsibility to communicate with the market.

Many companies use their websites to keep in contact with their shareholders on a continuous basis and, more specifically, in order to facilitate and inform their participation in upcoming general meetings. To this effect, they provide for a special shareholder/investor relations page on their website. Information to be disclosed on the website is detailed in the Manual (see II. Disclosure on the corporate governance and investor relations pages of the website). This includes internal regulations such as Board and Board committee terms of reference.

The website also includes current and periodic reports. The periodic reports refer to the quarterly reports and annual report. Current reports include reports on corporate governance changes for the purposes of informing the market about any deviation from compliance with the CG Code.

Investor relations is the “communication of information and insight between a company and the investment community. This process enables a full appreciation of the company’s business activities, strategy and prospects and allows the market to make an informed judgement about the fair value and appropriate ownership of a company”<sup>50</sup>.

Many larger publicly traded companies now have a dedicated IR department or person to oversee most aspects of shareholder meetings, press conferences, private meetings with investors, investor relations sections of company websites, and company annual reports. They usually report to the Chief Financial Officer (CFO) or Treasurer and liaise with the Board. It is fundamentally important that the IR department is responsive and efficient if the company wants to attract and retain capital. The IR should be able to provide convincing information to investors.

Provision D.9 specifies that companies should organize at least two meetings/conference calls with analysts and investors each year. Whilst investor relations are the responsibility of the investor relation department, it is considered best practice for the Chairman to be involved in meeting with significant shareholders.

In larger best-practice companies, shareholders may meet with the Board Chairman to discuss governance concerns as they arise, in addition to meeting with the CEO and Chief Financial Officer on matters of company performance. The Chairman ensures that the views of the shareholders are communicated to the entire Board.

<sup>49</sup> Listed companies are required by law to publish and maintain a website (the requirement results from various provisions, including Art. 5.10, 6(1) 6(2), 19(2) and others of Regulation No. 6/2009 regarding the exercise of certain shareholders rights during shareholders meetings of the companies or Art. 107(2) and 112<sup>1</sup>(3) of Regulation 1/2006 on issuers and operations with securities.

General Shareholder Meeting rules

Provision D.4-D.7 should be reflected in the Company's rules of the GSM. A good practice example thereof is disclosed in the Manual, Exhibit 9.

Provision D.4 refers to restriction of the exercise of shareholder rights<sup>51</sup>. It is considered best practice for each share to carry one vote. There should not be shares with multiple voting rights, preferential voting rights, or maximum voting rights.

In order to give shareholders the opportunity to attend the general meeting of shareholders (GMS), the company should arrange for the Notice of the GMS and related papers to be sent to shareholders at least 20 working days before the meeting<sup>52</sup>. -

General meeting material<sup>53,54</sup>

All Board members, the Board Secretary, and the internal and the external auditor attend the GMS<sup>55</sup> and are available to answer shareholders' questions relevant to their responsibilities.

Facilitating shareholder participation in the general meetings of shareholders is important as shareholders vary in geographic location. Best-practice companies often publish the date and time of their next GMS a year in advance. Proxy forms provided by companies should always offer a "vote withheld" or abstain option in case shareholders want to demonstrate concerns without opposing a resolution<sup>56</sup>. The company should ensure that all valid proxy appointments received for general meetings are properly recorded and counted<sup>57</sup>. Shareholders are usually allowed to vote electronically. All voting should be conducted by poll<sup>58</sup> and the level of proxy votes should be disclosed.

<http://www.oecd.org/daf/ca/corporategovernanceprinciples/31557724.pdf>, 32 on shareholders' rights

<sup>52</sup> It is a legal requirement for the GMS (any GMS) to be convened and related information to be provided at least 30 days in advance of the meeting, in accordance with Art. 4 and 6 of the CNVM Regulation 6/2009 regarding the exercise of certain shareholders rights during shareholders meetings of the companies.

<sup>53</sup> Information to be disclosed in relation to the general meeting is provided by the Directive 2007/36/EC, available via <http://eur-lex.europa.eu/legal-content/EN/TXT/PDF/?uri=CELEX:32007L0036&rid=2>

<sup>55</sup> Board members are required by law to participate in the general meeting of shareholders (see Art. 153<sup>23</sup> of Law No. 31/1990 on companies).

<sup>56</sup> Romanian law requires proxy forms to include the "abstain option" (see Art. 15(1)5. of Regulation No 6/2009 regarding the exercise of certain shareholders rights during shareholders meetings of the companies).

<sup>57</sup> Proper recording of proxies and counting of votes casted thereunder is also required by Romanian law (see Art. 19(1) of Regulation 6/2009 regarding the exercise of certain shareholders rights during shareholders meetings of the companies).

<sup>58</sup> The voting by poll system is a Romanian legal requirement (see Art. 101 and 120 of Law No. 31/1990 on companies)

Dividend policy

A dividend distribution policy is fundamental both to the income requirements of investors and to a company's investment and financial planning. It should be consistent with the company's strategy and the Board's assessment of its prospects.

The total dividend is submitted to the general meeting of shareholders<sup>59</sup>. As a best practice, companies should provide a clear statement on distribution policy<sup>60</sup>, setting the proportionate split between dividends and investments, and providing the dividend cover. A company should also provide an explanation when the profits available for distribution are different from those disclosed in the accounts. This should be submitted to shareholders for approval.

It is best practice for the dividend policy to clearly state:

- The percentage of net profits for dividend payments;
- The terms and conditions for dividend payments;
- The amount of dividends payable for shares of a specific type and class;
- The minimum amount of dividends payable for shares of each type and class;
- The procedure for the payment of dividends, including the schedule, place, and methods; and
- Circumstances when dividends will not be declared, or when dividends may be partially declared on preferred shares if any.

Forecast policy

It is also common practice among listed companies to publish a forecast statement<sup>61</sup>. This is a forward-looking statement that provides data relating to trends and factors likely to affect the company's revenues, margins, capital spending, and earnings. Due to inherent uncertainty, results sometimes significantly differing from forecasts initially presented.

The forecast policy should provide for the frequency of forecasts, period envisaged, and content of forecasts. Forecast statements should be provided to all shareholders and not just a select group of analysts. Therefore, forecasts are often part of annual, half-yearly, or quarterly reports. In addition, it is good practice to publish the forecast policy on the corporate website.

<sup>59</sup> It is a Romanian legal requirement that distribution of dividends be approved by the general meeting of shareholders (see Art. 111 (2) (a) of Law No. 31/1990 on companies)

<sup>60</sup> Listed companies are required to include information about their dividend policy in the annual report (See Art. 224, para.3 (b) of Law no. 297/2004 on the Capital Market, and Annex 32, pt. 3.2 of Regulation no. 1/2006 on issuers and operations with securities).

<sup>61</sup> Romanian law requires companies to include, in the annual report, an indication of the company's likely future development (See Annex 32, pt. 1.1.9 of Regulation no. 1/2006 on issuers and operations with securities)..

Appendices

These models are based on the Principles of the BSE Code of Corporate Governance and best practice observed in Europe. They however remain purely informative.
